Developmental Studies (DEV) courses are designed for students who have a below-passing score on the Texas Higher Education Assessment (THEA) or another test approved for the Texas Success Initiative program. These students are required to participate in a skill development program, and must register for one or more DEV courses. Student performance in DEV courses is graded as satisfactory or unsatisfactory but is not included in grade point average calculations. A student who registers for any DEV course also must register for at least three semester hours of graded college-level courses at the University. Registration for DEV courses must be approved by the Texas Success Initiative Office.

DEV 000M, 000R, and 000W are noncredit, individually structured courses with no fees. To register for these courses a student must confer with Texas Success Initiative Office counselors and UT Learning Center staff to devise an individualized study contract specifying the form and content of each course.

All other DEV courses are credit courses which are included in determining the student's course load to satisfy Veterans Administration, NCAA, housing, and financial aid regulations. These courses require payment of the normal tuition and fees for undergraduate courses at the University, but may not be counted toward any degree.
